NEW YORK CITY — Ever since he negotiated the release of the Cuban prisoners, attorney James B. Donovan (who worked without fee) has been bombarded with requests to work more of his magic (to free Irish firebrands in English jails, Americans in Red Chinese jails, etc.). Donovan's reaction: "You could make a career out of this, but I do have to earn a living." One mercy job he is pursuing: freeing those 23 Americans still in Castro's prisons.
